A word about walk-throughs, "teach-throughs" and recaps. One of the things I have tried to teach the Introductory Class is the ability to read dance instructions and dance dances without a walk-through as I believe this is a useful skill to acquire, particularly when one is visiting other clubs; even more so abroad. I would therefore prefer not to have walk-throughs on the night but if there is a sufficient groundswell of opinion on the floor for a walkthrough I shall of course acquiesce. And of course if the Introductory Class want a walkthrough who am I to deny them? Although there will be stern talk at the next class.

Note that the recaps will be just that and not "teach-throughs". They are intended to be memory-joggers, not an attempt to teach the dance to those who might never have come across it before. Hopefully the cribs that are attached are sufficient for dancers to prepare beforehand.

The Introductory Class look forward to meeting you and being dazzled by your expertise and friendliness! In return they will provide you with gastronomic delicacies never before seen at a tea break (well, except at Somerset West!). We hope you have a really fun evening with us.
